Winners Announced for Prestigious Project of the Year Awards

Winning Projects Announced During Ceremony at the 7th Global Infrastructure Leadership Forum in New York City

WASHINGTON, D.C. – CG/LA Infrastructure Inc., a global market maker specializing in strategic infrastructure project identification, announced the recipients of their prestigious 2014 Project of the Year Awards. The awards honor the leaders driving the next generation's most transformative global infrastructure projects in five categories: strategic, finance, engineering, job creation, and green/new infrastructure.

“The G-20 recently vowed to raise global GDP by 2% above the trend line through increased investment in infrastructure. The Projects of the Year Awards recipients are the groundbreaking projects that show how we will transform that goal into reality,” said CG/LA Infrastructure President and CEO Norman F. Anderson. “The awards honor the leaders who are creating transformative infrastructure projects critical to creating growth and opportunities in their countries.”

“CG/LA's Project of the Year Awards identify the exemplary infrastructure projects that set new standards for the industry. Aconex is proud to partner with organizations like these, helping them to manage risk and improve quality, as they deliver complex projects successfully,” said Leigh Jasper, Chief Executive Officer at Aconex, sponsor of the 2014 Global Project of the Year awards. Aconex provides the structure that sets new standards for managing information and processes between companies throughout the lifecycle of infrastructure, construction, and engineering projects.

The winners are as follows:

Strategic Project of the Year:

- North-South Corridor, Africa;

Job Creation Project of the Year:
